Treasurer's Report

Jeff Schoening reported the club has 194 members as of Sept. 3: 175 active regular, 12 juniors, five super-seniors and two honorary (Clyde Carlson and Dick Rovig). Total 2013 dues collected from members amount to $11,635.

Year-to-date income is $12,540, according to Schoening's report, while expenses to date are $11,213.93, mainly from Washington State Golf Association dues ($5,034), prize-fund payout ($2,131) and administrative stipends ($2,100). Year-to-date balance comes to $1,326.07.

Schoening also presented a spreadsheet of JPMGC tournament finances for 2013 through Sept. 4, with a wealth of information on number of players per event, fees paid (including breakdowns of fee allocations to golf, food and prizes), prizes and more. One interesting note: Total winnings per total players comes to $25.83. Schoening projected the club would end 2013 with a balance in the range of $500-$1,000. With three official tournaments remaining, "I think we're fine," said Trevor Cameron.

President's Report

Cameron reported on the Seattle Cup, which the Jefferson Park men's club won with 17 points, edging out Jackson Park (16.5 points), West Seattle (15.5 points) and Interbay (11). While congratulations are in order for Jefferson's first victory in this intra-city Ryder Cup-style competition, it was noted Jefferson won four points via forfeit, under various circumstances. Cameron indicated a discussion would ensue with the other clubs on different ways to score forfeits, which benefit teams randomly.

Team Captain's Report

John Clements reported on the upcoming Jackson Park Classic, a two-day stroke-play event for OHGC members on Sept. 8-9. Low gross and low net winners will get $200 apiece on the books, with top-three payouts for gross and net of $150, $125 and $100. Two KP's per day will be worth $50.

Meanwhile, Fall Field Day is coming Sept. 21, Clements said.

He also noted a search is under way for a new Jackson Park director of golf to replace Pete Guzzo, who recently left the position.

Other Business

Schoening wondered why JPMGC members do not accrue Premier Golf points with their payments for club events. Cameron and Clements said they would look into it.

Trustees also discussed the club's website, and generally agreed on a need to upgrade it with such features as social media, especially to help reach younger golfers. With a new official name for the club and a driving range coming soon to Jackson Park, this is considered an opportune time to revamp the website, as a means to better communicate with current and prospective members.

Cameron, Schoening, Mark Ohrenschall and Doug Nevins agreed to serve on a website committee, which will meet soon with webmaster Dick Rovig and chart a future course.
